The American Citizen Protection Bill—Comments and Criticisms of the Press.

LONDON, July 29, 1868.

The main points of the act for the protection of American citizens abroad, which was passed just before the adjournment of the Congress of the United States, were telegraphed to London and are published in the morning journals.

The bill is sharply and unfavorably criticised by the English press, though its passage does not appear to excite either surprise or anger. Journals of all shades of opinion affect to consider the bill a partisan measure required by the exigencies of the November elections. But they think this action of Congress will not tend to promote the success of American negotiations with foreign Powers to secure by treaty the establishment of the principles of nationality on which the bill is based.

The London Times says:—The passage of the American Citizen act will surprise no one. It was to be expected that the majority of the United States Congress would make, through such a measure as this, a direct bid for the Irish vote in the coming election. There is nothing in the general principle of the bill for England to deny or oppose. Irishmen have taken out their naturalization papers in the United States more properly use American passports while travelling in Europe, or serve in the armies of the United States even against Great Britain. So long as their new citizenship is a bona fide qualification, made in accordance with American laws, nothing can be said.

The London Times even accepts the rule that a naturalized citizen of the United States may come to England with impunity after plotting against the Queen of America. It is not, however, the London Times that is to be blamed for this. The London Post says the adoption of this bill by Congress anticipates and consequently delays the settlement of the question of the rights of naturalized citizens between the United States and European Powers. The latter may justly resent such action when making allowance for the exigencies of the approaching Presidential election.

The result is only what can be expected from the mutual good sense and feeling of two great and kindred nations.
